What Is The Difference Between The Flu And COVID -19?

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

The flu and COVID - 19 are both contagious respiratory illness, but they are caused by different viruses. COVID - 19 is caused by infection with a coronavirus (SARS-Cov-2) first identified in 2019. The flu is caused by infection with a flu virus (influenza viruses). From what we know, COVID-19 spreads more easily than the flu. Compared with the flu, COVID-19 can cause more severe illness in some people. Compared to people with the flu, COVID-19 may take longer to show symptoms and may be contagious for longer periods of time.

You cannot tell the difference between flu and COVID by the symptoms alone because they have some of the same signs and symptoms. Specific testing is needed to tell what the illness is and to confirm a diagnosis. Having a medical professional administer a specific test that detects both flu and COVID-19 allows you to get diagnosed and treated for the specific virus you have more quickly. Getting treated early for COVID-19 and the flu can reduce your risk of getting very sick. Testing can also reveal if someone has both flu and COVID-19 at the same time, although this is uncommon. People with the flu and COVID-19 at the same time will have a more severe disease than people with either flu or COVID-19 alone. Additionally some people with COVID-19 may also be affected by post-COVID conditions (also known as long term COVID).

Difference

If a person has COVID-19, it could take them longer from the time of infection to experience symptoms than if they had the flu. Typically, a person with the flu may experience symptoms one to four days after infection. A person with COVID-19, may experience symptoms two to five days and up to 14 days after infection.
