The Similarities of COVID – 19 And The Flu

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

How It Spreads:

Both illnesses are spread from person to person, who are near or in close contact with one another. Both are spread mainly by large and small particles expelled into the air from contagious people sneezing, coughing, talking, laughing or singing. These particles can land in the mouth or nose during close contact and transmitted mainly by inhalation. It may be possible, a person can get infected by touching another person. For example -shaking hands with someone who has the virus on their hands, or by touching a surface or object that has the virus on it, and then touching their own mouth, nose or eyes. The main difference between COVID – 19 and the flu, is the fast spreading of the COVID – 19 viruses. It is also the most contagious with a high fatality rate.

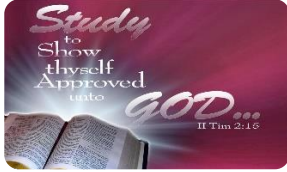

Symptoms:

COVID – 19 symptoms may appear two to 14 days after infection. Starting out mildly and worsen about seven days after they begin. Many of these symptoms can resemble those of a cold and flu. Such as a fever, chills, cough, difficult breathing, tiredness, sore throat, runny nose, congestion, muscle pain, body aches, headaches and weakness. There is a difference in COVID – 19 coughing. It is a dry hacking cough rather than a moist coughing occurring during the flu symptoms. Weakness is more common in people with COVID – 19, because of the length of time infected. Also they may experience mental changes, such as confusion, dizziness and brain fog due to decrease oxygen supply to the brain. Researchers revealed it will take longer for COVID – 19 patients to recover their ability to smell and taste, compared to those suffering from the flu (about 7 days versus 3 days). Fever also seems to be most common in people with COVID – 19. The reason fever often shows up as the first symptom, in COVID – 19 patients refers to the virus gets stuck in the upper respiratory tract for a long period of time. Later the virus drops into the lungs and then coughing starts.
