Grown and Evangelizing (Part 11)

2. Boldness is a result of watching and partnering with other bold witnesses.

Therefore, Paul and Christ both encouraged Christians to be faithful in sharing what they received. Pioneers of the gospel—mature witnesses—encourage others to share their faith. They do this by their faithful example and also by their teaching. We can have no doubt that the church was emboldened to preach not only because of Paul's example but because he encouraged them to do so, as he did with Philemon.

Let us understand that we must encourage other Christians to witness as well. This is crucial for those we disciple. They cannot know every good thing, every blessing they have in Christ, if they do not share their faith. With the measure we use what God has given, he gives back. Some are abounding in the knowledge of Scripture, abounding in peace, abounding in grace because they faithfully share God's Word. However, others do not, and therefore, they become spiritually stagnant.

Are you sharing your faith so you can know every good thing we have in Christ? Are you encouraging others to faithfully share their faith? It is crucial for their spiritual growth.

Application Question: In what ways have you experienced spiritual growth by consistently sharing your faith and serving?

Prayer Request

Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. James 5:16

“COVID-19 symptoms and the Omicron variant: What the latest studies show” (Pt.5)

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

More clues from humans — and hamsters

While the frequency of some symptoms may have changed with Omicron, doctors say there is no evidence of significantly different or new symptoms that have not been seen in previous COVID-19 cases. Instead, scientists will need to sort out how Omicron may have shifted the odds of some symptoms compared to others.

For example, loss of smell or taste — called “anosmia” and “ageusia,” respectively, by doctors — emerged early during the pandemic as a telltale sign of COVID-19. However, estimates of how many cases actually result in the symptom have ranged widely over the course of the pandemic and between different parts of the world.

In November 2021, one study estimated that as many as 1.6 million Americans were facing long-term “chronic olfactory dysfunction” following their infection.

Night sweats, another symptom cited by a doctor at a media briefing in South Africa early in the country's Omicron wave, has been touted by tabloids as “a telltale sign which only happens at night that could mean you have been hit by the Omicron variant.”
