5. Tell a Friend

Finally, shining light on the hidden habits in our lives often unleashes the power to set us free.

When we bring our secrets into the light, the transforming power of the Holy Spirit is already working in us to bring us freedom. Whether it's seeking accountability from a friend, or seeking professional counsel to overcome a long-term addiction, walking the journey with a trusted follower of Christ can make all the difference.

God's desire is to see his children living in abundance and freedom from sin (John 10:10). Christ died to set us free from sin — once and for all. While sinful habits may not die easily, we begin by standing in agreement that the victory is already ours, and we step into that victory one step at a time

Summary

As Christians, we have the ability to control our bodies with our minds, empowered by God's word and blessed with answered prayers.

Avoiding and overcoming bad habits and addictions isn't a question of ability, it's a question of desire, In Jesus Name.

“COVID-19 Could Increase Dementia, Other Brain Disorders for Decades to Come” (Part 4)

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

“The realization that there’s a neurological effect has been really recent,” says Nath. “I’ve been trying to beat that drum for quite some time. Patients have been complaining about it for months, but the scientists were not doing anything about it.”

That is changing. Several large-scale initiatives to study the problem have been announced in recent weeks. The biggest question is how much money the National Institutes of Health (NIH) will devote to them. In December, Congress allocated roughly $1.25 billion to the agency for COVID-19 research, to be spent at the discretion of director Francis Collins. Although he has not yet stated whether he intends to fund brain research, agency officials told Newsweek that NIH will likely support large-scale studies that examine different recovery trajectories. (They spoke without attribution and declined to give specifics because the plans are still being hashed out.) An NIH spokesperson confirmed that NIH will “expand efforts to determine the scope of the post-acute COVID-19 symptoms, understand the biological processes involved and, ultimately, test methods to prevent and treat such symptoms.”
