"Education with A Purpose" Part-5

Even a brief glance at some of the original school mottos testifies to the purpose of education in America from the beginning (see "List of..." n.d.). For example, Brown University, the seventh oldest institution of higher learning in the United States, founded by Baptist preachers in 1764 as Rhode Island College, has the motto In deo speramus, Latin for "In God We Hope." Princeton's motto is Dei sub numine viget, meaning "Under God's Power She Flourishes." Dartmouth's motto is Vox clamantis in deserto, translated "A Voice Crying in the Wilderness," a reference to Isaiah's prophecy of John the Baptizer in Isaiah 40:3 (Matthew 3:3). Another Ivy League school, founded in 1754 as King's College, renamed Columbia College when it reopened in 1784 after the American Revolution, and now Columbia University, has the motto In lumine Tuo videbimus lumen, which means "In Thy Light Shall We See Light."

George Washington University was chartered in 1821 (on land provided by George Washington) as Columbian College with the motto Deus Nobis Fiducia—"In God Our Trust." Northwestern University was founded in 1851 by Methodists from Chicago to serve Americans in the Northwest Territory. The motto on Northwestern's seal is Quaecumque sunt vera, meaning "Whatsoever things are true"—taken from Philippians 4:8. Also on the seal is a Greek phrase inscribed on the pages of an open book: ho logos pleres charitos kai aletheias, which translates as "The Word...full of grace and truth"—a reference to Jesus Christ taken from John 1:14. Even the University of California at Berkeley, a school known for its student activism, rebellion against America's Christian heritage, and "hippie" counterculture in the 1960s, has a Bible-inspired motto, "Let There Be Light," taken from Genesis 1:3.

Prayer Request

Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. James 5:16

HealthCare Ministry- Coronavirus "Avoid Catching COVID-19" Part-1

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

Washing your hands is the most important thing you can do to protect yourself and everyone else from COVID-19. You should do it often — some examples of good times are when you return from being outside, after you've touched a potentially infected surface, after you use the bathroom and before you eat. Hand washing fights the virus in two ways: It completely destroys some copies of the virus, and nearly all that survive come off your hands and go down the drain. However, some survivors can hitch a ride in minuscule water droplets that fly into the air during hand washing. Removing clutter from around your sink limits the surface area where they can land and survive, and occasionally disinfecting the counter will keep them from infecting anyone. Make sure you also regularly disinfect surfaces that are frequently touched, like countertops, doorknobs and faucet handles. Increasing the amount of fresh air coming into your home will help flush out indoor contaminants, including viral particles in the air. Researchers aren't sure how many people are getting sick from inhaling airborne copies of SARS-CoV-2, but they're increasingly concerned that the virus can spread through particles that remain suspended in the air for up to a half-hour. "A little fresh air can do your body good, and we think there's evidence it can do your building good as well," said Kevin Van Den Wymelenberg, a co-author of the guide and a professor at the School of Architecture and Environment at the University of Oregon. "It's a simple strategy that we have access to in most buildings and homes."

"OUR HEARTFELT SYMPATHIES"

Our condolences are extended to Alvin Davis and Family at the passing of their loved one. May God comfort and strengthen them with each new day.

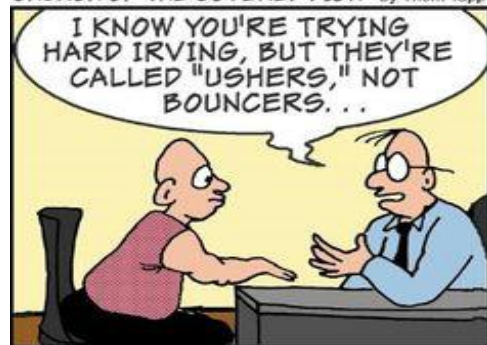

Our deepest sympathies are extended to the Tennyson, McKenzie, Camon, and Whiteside Families at the passing of their loved one, Zola. Our prayers are for God to give you strength and comfort in the days ahead.
