MENINGITIS

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

Occasional we have seen TV commercials concerning meningitis, focusing on medication and not the meaning or causes. Today let's explore meningitis for better understanding of this disease. If you noticed, most of the diseases we have discussed are viral and bacteria related, meaning they causes serious diseases. Meningitis is an infection and inflammation of the fluid and membranes surrounding the brain and spinal cord. These membranes are called meninges. They are layers of tissues that surround the brain and spinal cord, protecting them by holding them in place. Most cases of meningitis in the United States, are caused by different types of microorganism and other illnesses.

BACTERIAL MENINGITIS: Bacteria that enter the bloodstream and travel to the brain and spinal cord – (central nervous). Bacteria meningitis also can occur when bacteria directly invade the meninges. This may be caused by an ear or sinus infection, a skull fracture or rarely some surgeries. Bacteria meningitis is a highly contagious infection, affecting mainly teenagers and young adults. It can cause a local epidemic in college dormitories, boarding schools, and military bases. Vaccination can help prevent infection. If vaccinated, anyone who has been in CLOSE contact with a person with meningitis, should receive an oral antibiotic to help improve the prevention of meningitis. Listeria is another bacteria found in unpasteurized cheeses, hot dogs and lunch meats affecting older adults and people with a weakened immune system are most susceptible. VIRAL MENINGITIS: Usually mild and often clears away on its own. Most cases in the United States occurs in late summer and early fall. Viruses such as herpes simplex, HIV, mumps and West Nile can cause the disease. PARASITIC MENINGITIS: Can be caused by a tapeworm infection in the brain, cerebral malaria, swimming in fresh water and eating foods contaminated with parasites. GOOD TO KNOW, parasitic meningitis isn't spread between people. Seek immediate medical help, if you or someone you know have fever, severe headache that doesn't go away, confusion and stiff neck with severe pain on movements.

Grace is when God gives us good things that we don't deserve.

Mercy is when He spares us from bad things we deserve.

Blessings are when He is generous with both.

Truly, we can never run out of reasons to thank Him.
