Some Valuable Nuggets on Forgiveness Ephesians 4:32 (Part 14)

D. HAVE COMPASSION ON THE OTHER PERSON AS A FELLOW SINNER NEEDING GOD'S GRACE.

Paul tells us to be kind and tenderhearted toward those who wrong us, rather than bitter and angry.

One way to do that is to realize that you don't know all that the other person has gone through in his life. Perhaps his parents abused him. That isn't an excuse for his sin but realizing that he may have had a difficult life may mitigate your anger and put you in the frame of mind to forgive. In other words, the person who has wronged me is just like me, a sinner in need of God's grace. So I need to be kind and forgiving towards him.

Some of us have been abused emotionally, physically, or sexually as children by your parents or by trusted family members. Some of us have children who were abused by your mate or by a family member. Some have been betrayed by an unfaithful spouse whom you loved and cared for deeply. These kinds of wrongs are not easy to forgive.

But if you're a Christian, seeking and granting forgiveness are not optional. Jesus said that if you do not forgive others, the heavenly Father will not forgive you (Matt. 6:15; Mark 11:25).

Prayer Request

Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. James 5:16

HealthCare Ministry "Update on COVID" +-(Part 2)

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

COVID-19 cases are rising once again across the U.S. The CDC now recommends that everyone wear face masks in areas of substantial and high transmission — regardless of whether you're vaccinated or not. This includes most of Northeast Ohio, and all counties in Florida

With the arrival of the COVID-19 vaccines, we hoped that life would soon return to normal. Unfortunately, it's not time to let down our guard just yet. The delta variant is particularly concerning as it's far more transmissible than previous variants of COVID-19.

It's normal for viruses to mutate, especially coronaviruses and influenza viruses. Most of the time, the changes (mutations) in a virus are so small they don't make a significant difference in how it spreads. Sometimes though, a mutation helps a virus infect people more easily. For perspective, a person infected with the original COVID-19 strain might infect about two other people. But if you're infected with the delta variant, you could infect as many as eight people.

There's also been a lot of media around breakthrough cases. A breakthrough infection is when a person is infected with COVID-19 more than two weeks after they are fully vaccinated. While the COVID-19 vaccines are highly effective at preventing serious illness, no vaccine is 100% effective at preventing infection.
