COVID – 19 Variant Update

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

I believe it is safe to say, we are aware COVID – 19 is infectious and a deadly virus. Since it was discovered in December 2019, millions of people have suffered with severe respiratory problems. Some were hospitalized, while others died from severe complications of COVID – 19. Keep in mind: the virus COVID – 19 (SARS – COV -2) is the original with many different variants, mutating from COVID – 19. The virus needs a live host to replicate their genetic code. This means all viruses genetic code changes producing new variants. These changes can affect how contagious a virus is, how well it responds to treatments and how severely it affects people. COVID – 19 has experienced numerous mutations, since 2019. Two notable variants, Eris and BA 2.86, originated from XBB lineage which descended from Omicron.

BA 2.86, the newest virus, was first identified in Denmark and Israel. Currently as of August 23, 2023 BA 2.86 is now in America. The difference between the two latest viruses: Eris has a high rate of transmission from person to person. BA 2.86 has several additional symptoms – skin rash, diarrhea and conjunctivitis. Both have symptoms of fever, coughing, shortness of breath, fatigue, muscle aches, headaches, loss of taste and smell with sore throat. BA 2.86 is more capable of causing infections in people who previously had COVID – 19 or who had received COVID – 19 vaccines. Good to know: It is too soon to know whether BA 2.86 variant, might cause more severe illness compared with previous variants. The CDC is closely monitoring hospitalization rates to identify any potential early signals that the BA 2.86 variant is responsible for an increase in severe illness. REMEMBER: our body's immune system has two parts – the innate immune system is what we are born with, while the adaptive immune system changes to new threats as they arise. The skin and mucous provide the first line of defense against pathogens. The body's immune response involves many components, including B cells that makes antibodies and T cells that can react to infected cells. A reduction in one does not mean that the COVID vaccines will not offer protection.
