Prediabetes

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

It is that time of the year, when families come together recognizing Thanksgiving and Christmas. Two of the most enjoyed holidays. With large luxurious meals and mouthwatering pies and cakes. A welcome feast for an increase in your blood glucose (sugar) level. We all enjoy good eating, but there are consequences behind eating too much foods high in carbohydrates. Prediabetes is a serious health condition, where blood sugar levels are higher than normal, but not high enough to have a diabetes diagnoses.

Known Fact: Insulin is a hormone made by your pancreas, that acts like a key to let blood sugar into the cells, to use for energy. Remember: Your cells are your workers to keep your entire body functioning normally. Eating more than normal amounts of sweets, causes a rise in blood sugar. This makes your pancreas work harder producing more insulin, to help transport glucose into the cells. Eventually your pancreas can't keep up and your blood glucose level rises. Setting the stage for prediabetes and type 2 diabetes is down the road.

It is very important to have blood glucose levels done. Your doctor will determine how often you need a test, especially if you have a family history of diabetes.
