HealthCare Ministry

Why The Now – Dominant BQ COVID Strains Are Cause For Concern:

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

– Increasing cases from BQ.1 and BQ.1.1 expected in the coming months – . New Omicron subvariants BQ.1 and BQ.1.1 together now make up more than half of all COVID cases in the U.S. (30.9% and 31.9%, respectively), according to the CDC Data Tracker. There is a rapid rise from early November 2022. David Weber, MD, MPH of the UNC Medical Center in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, reported the rising prevalence of these variants is likely attributed to ineffective immune responses from prior infections and vaccination. Healthcare providers should still rely on safe approaches, such as boosters, antivirals and masking.

The bottom line is those variants, BQ.1 and BQ.1.1, because they escaped immunity from natural infection ... we'll expect to see increasing proportions of them over the next couple months. Researchers have proven by December 1, (the variants) would be more than 50% and guest what – they were correct. They also suggest by January 1, more than 80 % of the circulating variants will be BQ.1 and BQ.1.1.

In response to the increasing amount of these variants, the FDA announced the monoclonal antibody found to be effective against earlier variants, would no longer be authorized for emergency use.

Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. James 5:16
