"Reasons to Fall in Love with Him" (Part 14)

6. God's Love Is Comforting

Some children would give everything they have for someone who loves them and cares enough for them to set limits on their behavior and administer loving discipline when they violate those limits. That would mean more to them than all the material things in the world because it is the evidence of true love, and true love brings security and comfort. They know that someone who loves them enough to endure the unpleasantness of administering discipline will do everything in his power to take care of them, and that brings them genuine consolation. When we grasp the reality of God's love, we will no longer seek our security in jobs, bank accounts, investments, houses, husbands, wives, friends, or health.

We will rest in the Lord, free from all fear, secure in the assurance that He is going to provide all that we need and protect us from everything that will not be for our good.

Listen to the Apostle John again: "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casts out fear, because fear involves punishment, and the one who fears is not perfected in love" (1 John 4:18). God never punishes His children. He laid all the punishment for our sins on His Son. He disciplines us in love for our benefit, but even that is nothing to be afraid of. Understanding God's love eliminates all fear—fear of God's discipline, fear of what tomorrow holds, fear of losing a loved one, fear of losing a job, fear of natural catastrophes, fear of global war, fear of suffering, fear of death, fear of being alone, fear of rejection.

Prayer Request

Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. James 5:16

What is the New Strain of COVID-19 and Where Did it Originate?

Submitted by: Beatrice Ramsey

The variant — the catchily named SARS-CoV-2 VUI 202012/01 — was first detected after an unexpected spike in COVID-19 cases in the UK in early December. It was soon linked to more than 1,000 new infections in the wider London area as the UK's health minister, Matt Hancock, blamed it for the "very sharp, exponential rises" in cases. Scientists immediately worried that the new strain could be more contagious because its 17 mutations include changes to the "spike" protein — the part of the virus that makes it infectious. Those fears were realized Dec. 19 when Prime Minister Boris Johnson ordered an unexpected last-minute lockdown — revealing that the new variant appeared to be at least 70 percent more transmissible. Scientists have yet to confirm exactly where — or how — it originated, with backward tracing suggesting it has been around undetected since September. However, it is believed to have evolved in the UK. "There are no data to suggest it had been imported from abroad, so it is likely to have evolved in the UK," Nick Loman, professor of microbial genomics at the University of Birmingham, told a briefing last week, according to the British Medical Journal. Nine instances of the same variant have been reported in Denmark, while one case has been found in Australia and another one in the Netherlands, Catherine Smallwood, told the BBC. Several other countries have also reported confirmed variants that "carry some of the genetic changes seen in the UK," Smallwood added, with a similar mutation blamed for a rise in cases in South Africa.
