Understanding Gallstones formation

Gallstones are hardened deposits from a digestive fluid that is form in your gallbladder. The gallbladder holds the digestive fluid called bile, produced / made by the liver to help break down fats, releasing into the small intestine for removal of waste. HERE IS THE PROBLEM – if all the bile is not completely liquefied coming from the liver, small substance like a grain of sand will settle at the bottom of the gallbladder. Eventually the substance in the bottom will grow into a larger size, like a pebble. This will interfere with the flow of bile. Remember, growth will continue as long as the substance remain untreated. Good to know: some people develop just one gallstone, while others develop many gallstones at the same time.

However, if a gallstone lodge in a duct (pathway for bile to travel), this will cause a blockage. Resulting in sudden intensifying pain, in the right upper portion of your stomach. Also pain can occur in the center of your stomach, just below your breastbone. Other symptoms includes back pain between your shoulder blades, lasting for several minutes to several hours. Other symptoms such as stomach bloating, gas especially after eating fatty or greasy foods. Diarrhea, light colored stool, nausea or vomiting. If these symptoms occur notify your doctor immediately.

Intersection of Growing & Up

Let's continue to pray for our babies, near and far, who are testing or have tested.

We have seen them put in a lot of hard work and dedication. So if you see a youth, stop and give them a hug and remind them how proud we are of them. Let's encourage them to continue to stay grounded in faith and in their work.

There's a beauty in being rejected, misunderstood, unseen and unsupported by people. It teaches you to rely on God for everything.
