Different Types of Brain Strokes

ISCHEMIC STROKES are the most common type, caused by blocked blood vessels that interferes with blood flow to parts of the brain. The brain cells and tissues begin to die, within minutes from lack of oxygen and nutrients. There are two ways that would cause a blockage of blood supply. First, a blood clot that develops in the blood vessels inside the brain. This type of stroke is usually seen in older adults, especially those with high cholesterol and diabetic blood levels. The second way, is blood clots or plaque debris that develops any where in the body, that travels to one of the blood vessels in the brain through the blood stream. GOOD TO KNOW: a stroke caused by a blood clot sometimes can occur suddenly, during sleep or in early morning.

Also, it may occur gradually over a period of hours or days. HEMORRHAGIC STROKES involve bleeding in the brain, affecting the loss of daily substances for brain survival. When an artery bleeds into the brain, it will cause pressure to build up in surrounding tissues with irritation and swelling, leading to further brain damage. GOOD TO KNOW: bleeding occurs suddenly and rapidly because of high blood pressure. Usually there is no warning signs and bleeding can be severe enough to cause a coma or death. Recognizing stroke symptoms: F.A.S.T. Facial drooping, Arm weakness, Speech difficulty, Time to call 911.
