Pancreatic cancer begins in the cells of the pancreas. It is located in the abdomen behind the lower part of the stomach. It is about the size of your hand. Pancreatic cancer is often diagnosed at a late stage, when it is more difficult to treat. According to the American Association for Cancer Research, pancreatic cancer is the third leading cause for cancer death, in the United States. The estimated statistics for 2025 are: about 67,440 people (34,950 men and 32,490 women) will be diagnosed with pancreatic cancer. About 51,980 people (27,050 men and 24,930 women) will die from pancreatic cancer. Statistics related to a 5-year survival rate of 13% for all stages combined. The pancreas plays a major role in the process of food digestion. It makes enzymes that helps with digestion and also makes a hormone, insulin that control how our body store and use glucose (sugar). Part 2 next week.
