Suicidal Thoughts

Suicide is intentionally causing your own death. Suicidal thoughts is when you spend time thinking about dying. These thoughts can range from a general wish to die, without a concert plan to a detailed plan for suicide. Suicidal thoughts increase harmful behavior, such as reckless driving, increase use of drugs and alcohol abuse to a point where you will make a plan to take your own life. Every mention of suicide should be taken seriously. One study reported 4.3% of the adult population in the United States, had experienced suicidal thoughts. Same study reported 18% of children under 18 yrs of age had experienced suicidal thoughts.

Prevention: First, identify and reduce the source of stress in your life causing suicidal thoughts. Focus on a daily balance diet, obtain a proper sleeping pattern and avoid substance abuse. Provide daily regular exercise for mental and physical well – being. Break down daily tasks into achievable goals to reduce overwhelm behavior. Beware of negative thought patterns and challenge them, celebrating small positive achievements. Your mental health doctor will assess your situation to determine the type of treatment to help you.

Intersection of Growing & Up

Nothing in your life is random.

Not the timing. Not the place. Not even the waiting room.

Every delay carries purpose. Every closed door protects you. Every long road prepares you. Even the silence is sacred.

You may not understand it now, but God is working in the background—lining up blessings, strengthening your faith, and weaving beauty into the broken places.

God's hand is in it all. The highs. The lows. The in-betweens. He's not just watching your story—He's writing it with love.
