UNDERSTANDING DRY EYES

Dry eyes, a common eye condition affecting millions of people each year. We all produce tears, but not all tears are created equal. Let's get an understanding of tears. They are the clear salty fluid that is made of water, oil and mucus. The glands above each eye is responsible for production and releasing tears for eye health care. Quality tears maintain normal eye health by washing away dirt, germs and provide clear vision. As you blink, a thin layer of your tears spreads over the surface of your eyes lubricating and hydrating your eyes, by keeping them smooth and safe. Poor quality tears can not properly lubricate your eyes. Without the layer of defense, your eyes are more susceptible to damage on the surface. Many people may develop dry eyes as they age. The body naturally produce fewer tears as anyone gets older. However, it's common for adults to experience dry eye symptoms later in life.

Dry eyes are caused by a variety of reasons; such as female hormonal changes, inflamed eyelid glands from an allergic eye disease, rheumatoid arthritis, lupus, thyroid problems and vitamin A deficiency. Certain medications can also cause dry eyes – antihistamines, antidepressants. Laser eye surgery will also cause dry eyes. Symptoms includes: itching, thrash or sand feeling, blurred vision, excessive tearing. Treatments: artificial eye drops are the most common treatment for dry eyes. They are over the counter medications. However, before you do anything, it is highly recommended to talk with your doctor concerning treatments.
