UNDERSTANDING MIGRAINE HEADACHES

Migraines are disruptive headaches, that interferes with your daily routine and affect your ability to meet personal and social obligations. Migraines causes intense throbbing pains or a continuous pulsing feeling, usually on one side of your head. The feelings become worse whenever you move your head. It often happens with nausea, vomiting and extreme sensitivity to light and sounds. Migraines attacks can last from 4 to 72 hours if not treated. GOOD TO KNOW: Not everyone will have a warning sign to let you know a headache is coming. However, some people will have an aura, the invisible air field that surround a person, disrupting their life style. Migraine sufferers may experience visual changes or hallucinations before an attack. REMEMBER: any scent or odor can trigger a migraine headache, for some people. Other triggers are pins and needles felt in an arm or leg, weakness or numbness in the face with trouble speaking. But migraine symptoms varies from person to person.

Sad to say, women experience migraine headaches more than men. Studies indicate that 17% of women experience migraine attacks, while only about 6% of men experience migraine headaches. Women in the reproductive years are more vulnerable, due to hormonal influences especially estrogen. During the menstrual cycle, estrogen hormone levels are low and can trigger a migraine headache. After menopause, the frequency of migraine tends to decrease, narrowing the gap between male and female. There is no cure for migraine headaches, but medical treatments and healthy lifestyle changes can help keep migraine under control. Notify your doctor if you have an intense headache that won't go away, with over the counter meds.
