Pain is an uncomfortable sensation triggered by the nervous system, activation of an actual tissue damage. Pain is a very personal experience that varies from person to person. What feels very painful to one person may only feel mild to another. Risk factors, such as your emotional state and over all physical health, can affect how you feel pain. However, pain can affect your relationship with family and friends. Also make it hard to work or do the things you enjoy. But, better understanding of pain helps to reduce anxiety and improve your coping skills. There by enhancing your quality of life.

Pain is among the most important signal, our body gives to help us survive. It will alert us to harmful changes in our bodies. Such as, a heart attack or help us learn to avoid something harmful, like touching a hot stove. In this way some form of pain keep us safe. Pain can continue after an injury has been resolved and is known as Phantom Pain. An example is amputation of a body part. Most reported symptoms will include tingling, burning or shooting sensations in the missing limb. Pain can also be accompanied by other symptoms like tiredness, poor appetite and difficult sleeping. Common symptoms includes – sharp pains, associated with injuries. Dull / aching chronic pain refers to health illnesses, throbbing pain- linked to headaches, cramping is linked to the stomach or muscle pains. Understanding the location, duration and type of pain makes it easier, to talk with your doctor for pain management. REMEMBER: no pain should be ignored.
